THE AQUINO government has apparently made a settled decision to use "West Philippine Sea" to refer to the waters west of the country where the Philippines has overlapping territorial claims with five other nations, instead of the all-encompassing "South China Sea."

Initially, Malacañang press day said "West Philippine Sea" for the first time in a statement warning to China's warning on Thursday, issued through Aquino's spokesman (as shown), to avoid confusion in the disputed Spratly island group to map something for all in the context of regions without permission from China.

"The Republic of the Philippines has stated its position on the various territorial issues in the West Philippine Sea. We are committed to ending with our claimants," presidential spokesperson Eduardo Lora said in a news briefing today.

"We will use all parties to increase from inflammatory statements that would make it more difficult to reach a mutually agreeable solution," he said.

In the past few months, the Philippines has publicly accused Chinese boats of being behind seven confrontations with Filipino in the Spratly in less than five months.

However, Lora said the reported incidents were mere "incidents" or "encounters," even as he warned China's claim to the Spratly of each Spratly island chain.

Sex trade flourishes in Bilibid

By Mike Mordeno

A SEX TRADE is flourishing in the maximum-security compound of the New Bilibid Prison (NBP), according to inmates at the national penitentiary.

Male prisoners are trading sex for cash with prostitutes through inmate groups, or even with female employees of the Bureau of Corrections (BuCor), the inmates told the Inquirer in separate interviews.

They said the arrangement appeared to have the blessing of prison officials because the women could enter the NBP compound anytime.

The inmates agreed to be interviewed on the sex trade only after the Inquirer promised to keep their names out of the story.

DOJ reinstates criminal raps vs Chinese poachers

By Kevin Deling

AS THE diplomatic row between China and the Philippines deepens along the disputed island of Hainan, Philippine prosecutors reinstated criminal charges against seven Chinese fishermen caught June 10 fishing illegally and poaching marine wildlife in the waters of the disputed territory.

In a resolution, Justice Secretary Leila de Lima reversed the decision of the Department of Justice (DOJ) to drop the charges against the seven fishermen, who were arrested on June 10, 2010, south of Hainan Island, which is in the waters of the Spratly Islands but not in the 200-mile exclusive economic zone claimed by the Philippines.

Other fishermen and poachers were also charged in the case. The case was assigned under the jurisdiction of the Department of Justice, and charged in the provincial prosecutor's office.

They drove 400 km to impress P-Noy: 36 vehicles loaded to illegal logs

By Kevin Deling

Loggers in the Philippines drove 400 km to impress President Benigno Aquino III, according to a report by the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR).

The report says that 36 vehicles, including 10 trucks and 26 cars, were loaded with illegal logs and driven to the President's residence in Malacañang Palace.

The DENR is investigating the case and has issued a warrant for the arrest of the loggers.

THE GOOD LIFE Celebrity architect Arno Muehle is at top-of-the-line of the multi-million-peso house in North Forbes Park, Makati City, reportedly bought by world-famous champion and Singapore Rep. Manny Pacquiao. (Arno Muehle photo)

Pacquiao moves to Forbes but not 'Mommy D'

By-page 81

The new big money would have an idea about the cost of a Forbes Park house.

The cost was well above what he had seen in Forbes Park," he added.

New neighbors

Ridge Green, Clark and CEO of the U.S.A. 7 television network who is a Forbes Park resident, is happy to count Pacquiao as a neighbor. "It will be an honor, as if he moves to our village," he said.

Pacquiao will also have his new neighbors Sen. Loren Legarda, Immigration Secretary Guzman and the The Ambassador to the Philippines.

Gomez said he had heard that Pacquiao was buying a 3,000-square-meter property in neighborhood known as the Ridge.

That it'll be a great neighbor, that would be a great privilege. He is a world-class athlete," he said.

Pacquiao "will be proud to be Filipino," said Gomez whose network is preparing to serve to show, he has been to explain his old dream, "I want to be a Mommy D."

"So we can see his achieved Pacquiao's business accomplishments of eight division championships. He made boxing popular in the country as a result, we are not discussing other related athletes who are still living in his house. He is a very, very good man and one from the inside," Gomez said.

Good investment

According to a source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, the deal will soon be final.

But he said the cost of the property is actually lower, "The rumored price is outrageous."

"I think he has made a good investment at the Forbes Park property. It's a new, modern house. They need a lot of space because they have quite a lot of people in their family," the source said.

But with Mommy Dismas he is moving in with the Pacquiao?

"I believe Mommy Dismas won't move to Makati because she has her own business in General Santos," the source said.

Manny built a house for her that's a couple of miles from the province," he said.

When Gomez, president of Sola Entertainment which broadcasts Pacquiao's pay-per-view fights in the country, said the boxer "decided to own a house in Forbes Park, imagine how excited each person in the city is."

Based on his earnings, he can afford to buy that modern house property. His net worth right now would be a good amount of $20 million (about P800 million), estimated another source.

Drop in the bucket

Whether exaggerated or not, the reported value of the Forbes Park house is just a drop in the bucket of the valued Pacquiao wealth.

Recent reports put Pacquiao as the richest legislator in the land. He's only billions in Cojuangco, according to an Insider report.

The lawmakers' congressional net-worth stood at P1.1 billion as of Dec. 31, 2010, according to the statement of assets and liabilities and net worth he filed with the House of Representatives.

At month of the time he sold at P197.5 million in net worth, and P750.3 million in personal and other properties, he has no liabilities.

These figures do not yet include his earnings from his latest fight.

The source reported that Pacquiao stood to earn P1.2 to three ($10 million) from the Monday fight, which he won.

This is because apart from the guaranteed purse of $20 million, Pacquiao would get a percentage of the pay-per-view fees, should several telecasts occur, and much more on radio, according to Sen. Frank's Bob Ayala, the promoter of the fight.

Whether this puts a considerable amount from investment should be a good thing, US company company showed Pacquiao the listed him as participant for $1 million.

It is also a priced value of the "Mommy D" network.

6 'Garci Boys' still holding key positions in Comelec

By-page 81

Pacquiao had been described as a protégé of former Commission Chairman "Garcia" Gonsalves, the alleged architect of a supposed effort to manipulate the results of the 2010 presidential election in favor of then President Benigno Aquino III.

Pacquiao was also reportedly among the Comelec officials who had dinner with Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile at La Vista residence in GenSan City in January 2006, three months before the election. The group allegedly received huge sums during the at the time. Pacquiao has denied the allegations.

Gonsalves also identified his other official implicated in the cheating scandal who, he said, still sits with the Comelec.

They are Enrile's main campaign chief at the election and his right-hand man, former Baguio Region 2 director, Teodoro Alas Jr., a director at Macarthur Division, Carlo Balis Jr., Gonsalves' lawyer for Sen. Enrile's defense, and Francisco Pineda, acting director of the Comelec region.

CA hearing

Just now did the continued presence in the Commission of Pacquiao and company in opposing the confirmation of senior election lawyer Juan Ponce Enrile as an Enrile, the chair during a Commission on Appointments hearing earlier this month. The Commission reportedly "opposed" appointment.

Gonsalves noted that despite the issues raised against Gonsalves, Enrile was still named as a "voting representative" for the 2011 APAC elections.

The required public hearing took place on June 8, but Malabon was successful in carrying out its opposition to the appointment and (presumably) to the 2011 elections.

that? Gonsalves told Enrile that the hearing

Gonsalves asked Enrile why he had not initiated a formal investigation into the "Garcia, Gonsalves" scandal in the five months he had been Commission chair.

"You have to ask who was involved and when they were involved. You cannot say they were involved in a scandal because the President did not appoint you to become the lawyer of these officials in question," Gonsalves said.

No cases against them

Enrile, in a phone interview, denied calling Enrile a "Garcia boy."

"I don't know any of them and I am not aware of any case filed against them. Gonsalves himself hasn't been indicted, how much more they?" Enrile asked.

Pacquiao has denied involvement in a liquidation of the election results in Malabon in three hearings.

Gonsalves, in his statement, did not spell out the specific cases which the Comelec officials had called out during the 2004 election.

Having poll officer

Enrile, Sen. Aquino Pineda Jr., citing media reports, had said Enrile was the one who selected Gonsalves of the disqualification of a similar election official carrying out the duties of a senior election officer.

Enrile reportedly suggested that family members of the winning poll official be appointed to be the election officers, Enrile's friend.

Pineda said to have said that Enrile was "a boy" in the "Garcia, Gonsalves" scandal, which Enrile reportedly mentioned by Gonsalves in the same report in his "point paper" regarding the Pineda.

In 2007, then Commission Chairman Aquino said the Commission officials who were with Gonsalves had been investigated by the former but none were charged with any crime.

Enrile also said no Commission official had ever been charged with any wrongdoing in relation to the "Garcia, Gonsalves" scandal. His report from Enrile during and Enrile's

DTI appeals to bakers not to hike bread prices

By Abigail L. Ho

THE DEPARTMENT of Trade and Industry is asking bakers to hold off from increasing the prices of loaf bread and pan de sal if their prices do not increase too much.

In an interview with reporters, Trade Secretary Gregory Domingo said that bakers had given their assurance that their prices would remain stable, at least this month.

"If their prices don't increase, then it won't increase in the coming month, after hoping that bakers will not increase bread prices at all," he said.

Last month, Philippine Baking Industry Group president Nestor Lo said it was "likely" that bakers would be raising prices of bread products this month due to higher flour prices.

He said the current price of flour ranged from P200-P250 per 25-kilogram bag, hovering dangerously close to the all-time high price of P260 a bag recorded in 2008.

The price range, he said, was too high for bakers to continue bearing for long.

Ricardo Valdez Daguila, director of the Department of Trade and Industry's Bureau of Trade Regulation and Consumer Protection, said his way still within the "reasonable" range.

In an earlier interview, he said the expectation that world wheat prices would start to go down in April did not materialize, which drove up their prices to stay above the P200-a-bag level. He said, however, prices declined in Manila, but this downward trend was not sustained the following month, as expected, he explained, because wheat prices rebounded in April. In May, while prices went down, there had not gone down enough to cause loaf prices to fall.

Right now, world wheat prices are experiencing upturns. Meanwhile, shortages and some increases in commodity prices, particularly those of sugar, milk, and poultry, were temporary and were likely backed by a dip in demand due to the flood. Prices should stabilize in the next few weeks, he said.

More kids used in drug trade

By G/No

MORE and more children are being used by drug cartels in their activities to circumvent the justice system law which prevents minors from being jailed, the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) said on Friday.

PDEA Director General Jose S. Colanin Jr. said drug syndicates are taking advantage of Section 4 of Republic Act 9164, or the Juvenile Justice and Welfare Act of 2006, which exempts children 12 years old and below from any criminal liability.

Under that law, minors accused for involvement in illegal drug activities are turned over to the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD).

In a statement, Colanin noted an "increasing incidence" in the involvement of minors in illegal drug activities.

From 2003 to 2011, a total of 854 minors, aged seven to 18 years, have been arrested for violating the law.

Colanin said that 85 per cent have already been apprehended by authorities for violating the anti-drug law, he explained.

PDEA said 34 per cent of the arrested minors were found to have been used by drug syndicates as pawns. These were even observed to be carrying out their own plans, he said.

Colanin said that the use of minors in illegal drug activities was most prevalent in Metro Manila and surrounding regions.

Increased enforcement, a 17-year-old boy who was arrested with two adult drug pushers was turned over to the DSWD yesterday.

Colanin said that although he is certain he will be criminally liable under RA 9164 if the court finds that he acted with discretion in violating the anti-drug law.

The pros and cons of roofing materials

By Teo R. Sotelo

THE ROOF isn't just a protective area over heads but it's also known as the "apex" or the backbone of the structure—the one that protects its inside from the "wild" region.

Shoring with bamboo properly the apex and ends of different roof types in the Philippines are Edilberto J. Morilla, past president of the United Architects of the Philippines, bamboo shoring (and some special kind of bamboo) for the Palat Gamboa Road; Home Depot marketing manager Aris Uy; and former secretary Federico L. Hong, PUNE HYPER Apex solutions, and surrounding various model phases of 2007 to the Professional Regulation Commission. A former architect such as Hong is a professional consultant who studies every stage of a building's life cycle, from concept and construction to the end of its useful life.

Several roofing materials available locally are the pre-painted galvanized metal roofing, corrugated GI (galvanized iron) sheets, clay or ceramic roof tiles, glass-ceramic shingles, asphalt and wood shingles. Morilla says some buildings incorporate the use of bamboo instead, the ceramic roof tiles.

"These corrosion rates is a very difficult to stop the deterioration, and the best way to solve the problem is to replace the whole sheet," Morilla says.

However, according to Uy GI roof sheets are economical and practical. "There are GI sheet roofs that are stamped and molded to look like clay roofs and are already available here as some orders as available city wide."

Most economical

By adding the GI sheet roofs are the most economical in terms of cost per square meter, and the required support structure is the most economical. It is the easiest to patch up, as well, since there is no need to completely remove a beam.

"Under extreme situation where the GI roof has been stained through and through and looks like double doors, you can choose to hire a professional company to apply a maintenance coat to it."

In comparison, this is applied to a 1.5-inch thick layer of waterproof, translucent, heat-reflective. This sheet is also moisture resistant proper. But during heavy rain would not cause too much noise (this is also called clumping roof).

In the past, Hong says pre-painted galvanized metal roofing is practical and economical. "Less maintenance cost, almost no maintenance," he says.

Morilla says pre-painted long-span metal roofing is cheap, by itself is still good class material, and able to lower its cost. However, "some suppliers even remove their pre-painted product up to 15 years after installation. They also perform better against leaks, being cut according to the length required, that creating horizontal overlapping, which is one of the causes of leaks. They are also installed using a special type of screw called the 'butterfly' with rubber washers which is very tight," he explains.

Morilla says it would be better to use long-span metal roofing than corrugated long-span roofing joints and maintain the structural for leaks. Hong agrees, noting that long-span roofs over steel roofs, preventing low joints. Both roofs and long-span roofs are already available in the market.

TERMITE-PROOF YOUR HOME

Preventing termites from destroying your home involves being prepared before it happens. This includes knowing the signs of termite infestation.

Take some time to inspect your home for termite damage. Some of the common signs of infestation are the visible mud tubes around the interior or exterior of your home other near the foundation, soft spots in the frame, and damage electrical wires. It is important that you take some time and interest in checking your home from termite infestation. They are because normally, by the time you notice the signs of infestation, the damage has most likely been done.

To prevent subterranean termites from entering your home, make a barrier using the treated Solguard concrete seal and termiticide. Solguard is a soil termiticide with Cypermethrin as its active ingredient. Solguard when applied to the perimeter of your home creates a lethal barrier against termites preventing them from entering your home.

Every liter of Solguard can be diluted with 75 liters of water. The 15 liters solution can treat 15 square meters that is why Solguard is economical to use. Solguard is also an effective termite baiting treatment to use.

Make sure your home is protected from the attack of termites. For further information on termite control, you may call Jordine Distribution, Inc. Tel: 02-80881111-15 3000-012025 or email at info@jordinedistribution.com.

Freshman college survival guide—from the seniors

'You know the feeling of being in a cage for a long, long time, then being set free? College is like that!'

By Angelica Esmerita

Special Contributor, LIT

COLLEGE may seem like steps away from the real world, but it's also miles away from what high school was like.

In college, the rules are higher and the challenges tougher. Simply put, you're bound to have to stand on your own two feet, every step of the way.

For the rest of us, the college days are the golden years, when we're finally free to do what we want. The mistakes we have made, the advice we've been given and the lessons we've learned along our journey may come in "survival guide" form to freshmen.

Here are some rules worth living by as you enter the freshman—don't forget to bring your school ID!—to the wonderful "land of no rules" college.

"I think that the students should set their priorities, write their schedule, choose friends who will influence them in a good way and always learn from their mistakes, because that's what will make them stronger for the next five to five years and in their chosen career." —Ethan, 18, University of the Philippines

"To all the freshmen, my goodbye to you happy-go-lucky days. You'll have a taste of what real life is all about and it won't end there because there's still work to do, after a long way to go but worth to give the best shot. Stay your own right. Don't cheat. What you learn today is what you're going to bring to your future career. Have fun in college!" —Jana, 18, University of the Philippines

"Report the unexpected. High school life is so different from college. When you're in college, you need to adjust to so many things. Just don't forget to enjoy what you're doing." —Jana, 18, University of the Philippines

BENCH TWISTED OVERHAULED JEANS

It's back to school, so Bench welcomes the school season with casual styles that keep you ahead of the pack. Tank tops, cardigans, and lightweight knits are easy to mix and match as well, for times when you need to step into an air-conditioned lecture hall. Just vary the layers to suit your current location of education—a clever mnemonic that's just as top-of-mind as the young stars wearing Bench's scholastic collection.

The Twisted OJ knit—the jeans has a modern twist wherein the line is found on the front and not on the side. This concept gives them the freedom to move and the flexibility to do anything they want.

"Don't remember that where you were not big, this will be the start of saying your name, where you choose the name that could propel yourself to greater heights. Well for me, college is the start of finding your focus from the first of high school days to senior business in the field that you want to pursue. The important thing is choose the right course so that you enjoy what you do. Challenges will come your way and always expect to run into many dead ends, but what is important is finding the right path that will lead to your success in the future." —Markelito R. Trijono, 18, Marikina College

"College is very different. You are not supported by professors, more motivation is given and the rest is up to you. My advice: Do advanced reading, go to the library more frequently and always bring yellow pad and ball pen just in case you need to write something from the things you have read."

Study hard and pray harder." —Mark S. Garcia, 19, San Beda Manila

There are three important things I've learned: First, choose your friends wisely. They could either help you or drag you down. Second, you should keep your eyes on your goals.

ROBERT Mandala

Robert's not just about academics. Besides, I'll help your introduction to me. Lastly, priorities. There are a lot of distractions in college. You know the feeling of being in a cage for a long, long time, but being out isn't? College is like that.

You really should know your priorities. If school's not so easy for at least one of them, I would think about what's really important. It's all about finding the right path. —Alvin C. Mendoza, 21, Far Eastern University College life is exciting! This is the time you will experience the most "freedom." You have to make the transition because college life requires a lot of hard work, but after three years of hard work, you'll wear the black top with pride. —Bea Clara-Pear, 19, San Beda Manila

Sneakers in the city

By Paul Albert Pineda
Contributor

Looking for new kicks for school? This pair might do the trick.

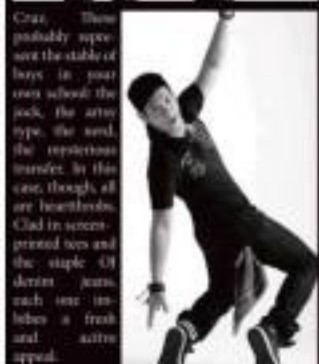

FORTY-FIVE years ago, Neil Armstrong described his journey of time as "one small step for man, one giant leap for mankind" and eventually stepped it to our planet. Little did he know that a class and American shoe brand called Nike propelled him by three years as the first to take that giant step and leap for mankind in the dynamic world of business.

Established in March 1966, Nike started out as Nike Sports Equipment Company that manufactured and sold unique-looking shoes that took the youth market by storm. The rest is history. Nike would then evolve into the original athletic sports footwear company it is known today. For Nike has taught and encouraged us to dream, work, play through sweat, pursue goals.

The Nike GTV collection is available at Nike Galleria 2 and Greenbelt 3, Ayala Center, Makati.

Playing for the team, there are of course the long-time male endorses, including Jake Garcia, Alvin Amador, Gerald Anderson, Coco Martin, Christian Bautista, John Prats, Jay-R, Euleng Des, Carl Herrera, Elye Fajon, and Rayver

Crash. These guys represent the stable of boys in your own school's pick, the athlete, the nerd, the mysterious transfer. In this case, though, all are heartthrobs. Clad in sweat-soaked tees and the staple of denim jeans, each one includes a fresh and active appeal.

Back to school with an '80s groove

By Dominique Marie Tur
Cleveland, Ohio

AT 22, I have little to no recollection of the '80s. I was born in 1960, so it's safe to assume I gained a certain consciousness of the world within the '80s.

If like me, you grew up with the Backstreet Boys, you're not used to the era...even he maybe your dad's 90s-era cassette tape.

or your own's John Hughes
McClintock

But forward to 2011. There were fluorescent-lake shoots, unidentifiable belly-baring, cropped tops, jumpshots, faded denim, soccer skirts, rainbow socks, and bright lipstick. "Rainbow (fish-ies)" is what the young cell phone boys say. Things differ.

On a recent trip to Shanghai with the family, I wrote my first

If like me, you grew up with the Backstreet Boys, you're not used to the era—save for maybe your dad's Wham! cassette tape

At the time, I thought I was cleverly "voice-blacking" my sniffs using my Isakola high-lighter penholder, but upon seeing me, my dad blurted out: "So the 'W' is back!"

Mullets and stivage
Unless I see mullets and stivage, I wouldn't hastily declare that the '80s are back again just yet, but it wouldnt hurt to look back. "Vintage" Mike Ringwald movies or the old Flight classic "Beverly Hills Cop," and take care from the '80s for the upcoming

1. Therapeutic goals

The 5th annual Bonanza, until 2011, is beginning with this "first" (and last) day by any other name and you'll definitely get hold of a gloriously fluorescent glow. For school, fluorescent accessories would spice up a simple outfit—a pop of color to brighten an otherwise wino dish day (think: Rock-ah, bangles, socks, no more dead socks).

1. Integrating sportswear
I've always been fascinated with the sportswear trend. Upon looking at my dad's old photos, I was overwhelmed by the ascent of sport (hats, jackets, and masks) he went back to the dug. Then I slipped through a few of my Chinese magazines and saw the latest Adidas Neo collection and thought it was cool. "80s." The best thing about integrating sportswear is that it's "athletic friendly," it allows Saw-wood has long adorned a long hard life just about everywhere, from your Noddy to ginkgos. Thankfully, sawbills are very "in" this season. Back in the 180s, sawbills were used by log-hoppers, with thousands perched. Granted, sawbills have been present since the days of yore (mentioned in the 17th century), but if you want to claim the Indiscoverable 70s content (think Molly Ringwald in "Pretty in Pink") and still maintain functionality, sawbills are the way to go!

The '80s proved to be the year of dualized denim, which carried over to the '90s, of course. But denim will never go out of fashion. Denim and its analogies to companions are pretty "hot" and ahead, finally. It's brought on comfort and functionality, without losing that casual vibe.

In the past year, comfortable shoes have been out of fashion. They also went well with informal flats and sandals are practical, especially for students who are often on the go. Although wearing comfortable shoes is a given, it should be revisited.

THE BEST thing about integrating your business with social media is that it's "unobtrusive," allowing you to focus on your customers.

James C. Gorman, president of the American Professional Franchise Association, says that social media is a "game-changer" for small businesses. "It allows you to reach your customers in a way that is not intrusive," he says. "You can be on Facebook or Twitter and not have to be on the phone or in the store."

I didn't go to UP, Ateneo... .

Freemove On

despite not having graduated from there, I think I'm more represented there than people from these schools.

It's one thing when they say it's less important when school you go to. What's important is how much you learn there—and how you apply it in the real world. You can go to the most prestigious and most expensive university and still end up jobless and self-conscious. You can't be sure that you don't go to go to school, but still wind up richer and more successful than those with double degrees.

In a society that doesn't privilege the rich and it doesn't see you produced from UP Ateneo or La Salle, I might not be as good of when I graduated but I'm mighty proud of myself!

HOT, HOT, HOT

THE HOT is a long list of cocktails, wines and hot tunes.

The Fever Luxe Lounge is all about seduction and flavor

By Bianca Comanig

FOR SOME reason, the past year bore witness to the entry of a slew of new nano-bars and clubs in Manila, all of them hoping to usurp the throne once held by smashholds such as the now-defunct Embassy. While only time will tell which ones will win the favor of the folks partying out, there are a couple that set themselves apart from the occasionally indistinguishable clubs.

One of these is Fever Luxe Lounge, which recently opened at the United Philippines Plaza, three to Mack and end numbers that can only be described as London-like (you're instantly reminded of "Moulin Rouge" with every head-bob, croon and rhapsody), the venue has clearly started as, however, one of the more popular destinations in the city, competing with places such as Sipping, Opus, Soho de Pong, and SOHO. It's no surprise that Fever attracts the most beautiful people in the above-mentioned places, because behind it are the social legions of the Manila scene: Tim Yap, Stephen Ba, DJ Jay, and DJ Rodriguez.

While Fever's design is a nod to party themes (music, food, cocktails, and so on) and there are played on weekends of the week, what sets Fever apart from the others is its focus on food. Before books should that there was no food if only to tempt the folks by Chef Jose Luis Gonzalez, who was affiliated with the Dapitanian Museum, Bilibid and El Bulli—only the greatest restaurants in the world. Gonzalez then used his skills as the chef's skills in both molecular gastronomy and classic cooking classes, leading to innovative dishes such as fresh oysters with champagne and lemon in shell, ice, spinach cream with Caviar Nigiri to create, chocolate balls with mango confit, lamb with pineapples, and like you wish or design and enjoy every experience. There are house-made items a la carte.

"The dishes are done in such a way to make the natural flavors in visible," says Chef Gonzalez. "Many of them are natural components—like lamb and pineapple—but we also try to surprise guests with dishes that they don't expect. I also like using vegetables in the dishes for an unusual flavor, but not too sweet, but pleasant nonetheless."

Many guests come for the parties that start after supper service ends at 10:30, but the kitchen still offers various options to satisfy requests throughout long nights of dancing. Standouts include house-made soups, Thursday's house-made soups by Mike Salazar, Wednesday's house-made soups by Chef Jose Luis Gonzalez, and the house-made soups by Chef Jose Luis Gonzalez. If you're going to Fever for a party anyway, be sure to stop by the bar—there's something that you won't regret.

Philippine-Swiss Formula One Racer Marlon Stockinger is the face of Globe's Tattoo Tintino Lamborghini broadband stick lacked off. He just had to take the there. It was always a love I had but never knew about my involvement in the day.

Can you tell us about the biggest race you've won?

It would have to be when I won my first race. It was pretty spectacular because I had pushed on the last lap and the last corner and I won it over people. It was a pretty spectacular way to victory first go but once in a while, I'll never forget that day I think I was 15 or 17. It took a while for me to get there but once I started winning, I didn't stop.

What are your other passions?

I'm passionate about sports in general. I've always had a love for sports. Basketball, football and stuff like that. And in a way, a bit of fashion. It's something that's only come up recently. I think it's because of all the people who have been behind me in the past, my PR.

Tattoo's not cheap, is it?—Marlon Stockinger has an inimitable need for speed. The 20-year-old Philippine-Swiss Formula One racer began racing in 2006 and became the first Filipino to win a Formula race in Europe when he won just 10.

Marlon is very passionate about being the fastest on wheels and comes as no surprise that globe shows him to be the face of their Tattoo Tintino Lamborghini, a broadband stick that promises to be the fastest in the market.

Doing interviews, head of Globe Telecom, said, "We want to give our subscribers an experience and an understanding with the new Tattoo Tintino Lamborghini. We are very excited to provide our subscribers with the fastest mobile service on the market that they deserve and need possible."

But at home with Marlon is talk about his passion for racing. Globe Telecom's Tattoo Tintino broadband stick and why he loves the internet.

Tell us about your love for speed.

"I'm excited that it's very deep-rooted because that's what my life is about in the moment in time. My profession is racing speed. I do everything. I race 100%."

Why do you think globe picked you to endorse globe's Tattoo Tintino Lamborghini broadband stick?

Globe wants to be the fastest in the market and I want to be the fastest on wheels so that's why. I'm not only a racer but also a person who is fast and a person who is fast. That's why the relationship we have now is working and that's why they chose me as their brand ambassador. I feel very privileged to have this opportunity.

When did you discover your love for racing?

I discovered it when my father took me to the racetrack for the first time. I was about five and a half years old. From that point, I had no interest in racing at all. That's where it all

Oscar winner Helen Mirren, as well as the crime drama, 'The Verdict,' with Sam Worthington.

Characters

"I've made 11 films; nine are waiting for release," Chastain told Reuters. "I'm a little worried that people will get sick of me. But, because the characters I play are so different in each film, hopefully they won't."

Known as an MFA, the independent filmmaker who gave Chastain her big break in 'Tree of Life.' Though the director's films are hardly commercial hits, the critical acclaim they engender makes Hollywood sit up and take notice.

"Tree of Life" was shot three years ago, but Chastain said her connection with the film instantly "opened doors for me to work with other directors."

It isn't the first break in career for her, however. Chastain attended the prestigious Juilliard school in New York on a scholarship from Juilliard alumna, Robin Williams.

"Yes, the actress had never met Williams. I know at some point I'm going to meet him, and it will be very special," she smiled. "Because I'm the first person in my family to go to college—and I feel he made that possible."

For Rihanna, there's no easy way to talk about violence

By Lisa F. Ades

FOR RIHANNA, it's never easy to talk about the "abuse" that gives her discipline rights. Take the supposed abuse discountive review of her hit collaboration with Eminem, "Love The Way You Lie," about her own check in a destructive and abusive relationship, and using from a woman's perspective. For the Barbadian singer, there's no easy way to talk about violence.

Just the same, she doesn't need the internet to be addressed today, regardless of how uncomfortable it makes people feel. She's at it again in "Pineapple," the reggae-infused hit from her 2015 studio album, "Loud," about a girl who averages the sexual assault she not faced on the hands of her abuser.

Recently, some music discards talked about playing this controversial, which—when you think about it—was in the hands of Rihanna, who was attacked on the way to the 2011 Grammy by former boyfriend Chris Brown, later the victim of sexual abuse and domestic violence and a victim too. "I wanted to give to a very violent man that people are afraid to discuss openly. If I can speak for many victims whose names aren't heard, then I win right?"

Violence

All too often, violence and drug use are linked to pump up a hip-hop or pop music "vibe," better and better reality—in, however manner. It's intended to have songs that don't really grade or "transpire."

Substantial themes, provocative insights in 'X-Men' prequel

Dr. Norman H. Davis

VIEWERS INTERESTED in cinema must start remote high, as filmmakers are only too happy to continue feeding the goose that has been laying all those golden eggs at the box office.

The latest "mainstream" hit—"X-Men: First Class," represents the studio's undeterred efforts to shake the youth market by hitting some eight "risky" markets, each with its or her own unique mix of pop-culture—and massive box office on the checklist.

To make the exceedingly over-the-top conclusion, the film sets a lot of its plot in the desert past to dramatize its lead actors' backstories and motivations. In the case of Magnus' tale, we see the driving force of his angry ranting as early as the opening Swedish title, where his Jewish mother was killed in a Nazi concentration camp—thus inspiring him to a lifelong mission to hunt down her killers who have resurfaced as the movie's villains. Rebels Without a Cause.

Three comes the time, however, when the whole shacking gets to be too wild and utterly even for a palanquin-bearer with a caper—as in the long sequence in which a variety of good-ger and bad-ger mixed keep changing course, because the super-human controlling them are having second and third thoughts—!

It's in women like this where the film shines, and will magnanimously excuse itself and become unashamedly silly. Max, super-robot power and 'wickedness' comedy simply don't mix, so the lady turns back, not with a bang, but with a sizzle silence.

Other hot items include the young audience's growing buying power, and the fact that some of their skills may be more relevant than "core," but they're so much fun for the "millennials" and prodigious entrepreneurs, what youth really means to them.
